Bumble Bees

Bumble bees are very important creatures. They spend their lives pollinating flowers, plants and crops. In fact two-thirds of the world's crop species depend on animals and fuzzy creatures like bumble bees to transfer pollen. They love to drink the sugary nectar in flowers, as it gives them energy.

Bees are very social and live in colonies of up to 200 workers!

Did you know there are over 250 different kinds of bumblebee in the world?
